Theme

"New Born Screening"

Date:27th July 2017

Venue:

250 Lecture Gallery, 2nd floor
Academic & Administration block,
ESIC Medical College

New Born Screening aims at the earliest possible recognition of disorders to prevent the most serious consequences by timely intervention. Screening is not a confirmatory diagnosis and requires further investigation.

Guidelines from developed countries recommend New Born Screening before discharge because of high prevalence of Metabolic errors. However, neonates are not screened in India because the health policies have typically targeted mortality and infectious morbidities but not disabilities. These policies have been successful in lowering infant mortality rates. But, the net effect of these gains has been somewhat offset by increase in disability.

This is an attempt made to improve awareness about New Born Screening among Health professionals.
